Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Tuesday 11 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloud and rain edging north, then brighter and drier.

Today:
Rather cloudy for central and northern parts with occasional rain, the rain becoming confined to the far north and the Isles this morning as brighter conditions in south spread north. A few showers develop in the brighter condition this afternoon.

Tonight:
Patchy rain over Shetland soon clearing but showers across the south merging into some longer spells of occasionally heavy rain this evening. Outbreaks of showery rain then spread north overnight.

Wednesday:
Rather cloudy with outbreaks of showery rain. Becoming brighter across southern and central parts with heavy slow moving showers developing, risk of hail and thunder. Risk of east coast haar.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Continuing showery with clear or sunny spells, the showers, especially in central and western parts, heavy at times and perhaps merging into longer spells of rain. East coast haar possible.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.